CASE STUDY: REDUCING AOG MAINTENANCE TIME

A large aviation maintenance and repair operations service provider was in need of Boeing exterior paint to support a 737-700 NG series aircraft that was down for maintenance. They required a manufacturer's certificate of conformance to accompany the paint, and needed it as soon as possible. The original paint they requested had a longer lead time and was not able to be certified in time.

Our AOG emergency staff was able to supply AkzoNobel Alumigrip 4250 series BAC color BAC93804 for the application, complete the order, produce the paint through our AkzoNobel-approved GracoRoberts' tint line, and ship on a Saturday to ensure the customer would receive in time. The MRO shop was very pleased with the speed of service and was able to reduce AOG maintenance time drastically, turning the aircraft around for service before the due date, and saving money in the process.
